Sharon Osbourne is no stranger to controversy. Don't forget, we're talking about a woman who sends dog poo in the post to people she dislikes.

She's publicly attacked Dannii Minogue, describing her as "like a mosquito that wouldn't go away," and she caused a national furore when she criticised Britain's Got Talent star Susan Boyle for having "a face like a slapped arse."

Now, the latest victims to come under fire are former This Morning presenter Judy Finnigan and Prince Charles' wife Camilla. In an extraordinary outburst, the 57-year-old has said both women are doing themselves an injustice by not going under the knife.

"Judy Finnigan is terrific – she's clever, talented and good-looking, but how much better would she look with a lift?"

"Then there's Camilla. I like her, she's approachable, but she could look more beautiful."

Judy, 61, was recently pictured looking jowly and tired. After her Sharon Osbourne is not wrong. Surgery could take 15 years off Judy's age, according to celebrity plastic surgeon Alex Karidis, but it would come at a price.

"Time is working against Judy now," he says. "She's left it late to begin having surgery so, if she did have it, the difference in her appearance would be huge, as a lot of work would need doing."

He says the problem areas for Judy are her eyes, jawline, neck and around her mouth area.

"She has jowls and her jawline is no longer visible, so she'd need liposuction under the chin to get rid of excess fat, and a neck-lift. Her cheeks need to be lifted, too.

"The folds of skin on her eyelids, and her eye-bags, need to be removed. Her eyebrows are in a good position, so she wouldn't need a brow-lift. Her nose to mouth lines and those from the sides of her mouth to her chin are deep, and would need fillers every three months."

Although Camilla's face has aged more gracefully, Mr Karidis says it displays signs of smoking, and she too would benefit from surgery: "Camilla has a typical smoker's face, because her
