Sharon Osbourne worries that her heartbroken daughter might turn back to prescription drugs

Kelly Osbourne hit an all-time low last week when she returned home from Las Vegas to find her new Pomeranian puppy Woody had died. And her mum Sharon fears the blow, which came within days of her split from her fiancé Luke Worrall, will once again spark her addiction to prescription drugs.

Kelly was just 16 when she became reliant on Vicodin, and she only managed to kick the habit early last year after her third stint in rehab.

"Sharon is desperately worried that Kelly will go back to using prescription painkillers," a source told new! "Kelly's very low and is still upset about the split. Sharon is keeping a 24/7 watch over her to keep her from slipping back into her old ways."

It's not known what caused the death of Woody, but the dog was particularly special to Kelly, 25, as she'd bought him as a present for Luke while they were together.

Kelly's trip to Vegas was intended to help her get over Luke, 20, who she claims cheated on her with another woman. And although it seemed that attending a friend's birthday party at Haze Nightclub had done her the world of good, she found herself back to square one on her return.

"My life just could not get any worst right now I come home to find my dog woody is dead," she said on her Twitter page.

However, when loyal fans expressed their anger at Luke's alleged indiscretion, Kelly stuck up for her ex, posting, "Please stop bashing luke i dont hate him so why should you? we are still best-friends just not dating so enough now please thank you!"

She followed it up shortly after with another tweet hinting she wanted to put the past behind her.

It read, "Like i have said onwards and upwards from here thank you guys for all your well wishes/support but lets turn this s**t into a diamond!!!!!"

As well as support from Sharon, 57, and the rest of her family, Kelly's close friend and confidante Kate Moss has also been on hand to pick up the pieces.

"Kate has been on the phone to Kelly loads," added our source. "She is trying to boost her confidence and get her back on her feet."

According to reports, Kate's advice is for Kelly to get "slim and sexy" by hitting the gym. And, although Kelly doesn't need to shed any pounds after losing 3st during her Dancing With The Stars stint, we can recommend giving the treadmill a darn good pounding to release any pent-up aggression!
